"Queen" Played Unique Role To Create Levine's "Harlow"

With his renowned flair for showmanship, celebrated movie producer Joseph E. Levine launched pre-filming activities for his Technicolor and Panavision production of "Harlow," opening at the Theatre, through Paramount Pictures release, with what has been exuberantly acclaimed as one of the most brilliant promotion coups ever accomplished in the history of motion pictures.

Moreover, Levine's memorable and astounding feat occurred in the middle of the Atlantic Ocean, aboard the famous Cunard Line's steamship "Queen Mary," months before actual shooting on "Harlow" started in Hollywood.

It began with the fabulous trans-Atlantic voyage of the luxury liner, when Carroll Baker, the screen's beautiful sex symbol of the Sixties, who is Jean Harlow in the picture, accompanied by Levine, a staff of makeup technicians and an international group of press, radio and TV correspondents to record and report the event, underwent her miraculous five day transformation.

She had boarded the ship as today's glamorous, exciting film star, and she landed in Great Britain looking, acting, talking and captivating the world as an almost flawless reincarnation of the legendary platinum blonde bombshell, "Harlow," the screen's explosive sex symbol of the Thirties.

The resulting avalanche of enthusiastic praise and publicity which greeted Miss Baker's seemingly magical transformation from "love goddess" of the day to "siren" of another decade, convinced producer Levine that he had made the right choice in selecting Miss Baker for the title role in his multi-million dollar production of "Harlow."

Highly controversial and at times sensational the Harlow legend has endured for more than thirty years. The Jean Harlow saga remained one of Hollywood's most incendiary topics until Levine began his penetrating research into her public and private life.

As Levine's lavishly mounted production of "Harlow" recreates her absorbing story, the fabulous platinum blonde was a vivid, magnetic and controversial beauty who shook the entertainment world to its foundation. The film also recaptures the grandeur of Hollywood in the 30's with its colorful and dazzling costumes and settings.

An international cast of top screen artists co-star with Miss Baker in Producer Levine's "Harlow." Academy Award-winner Red Buttons plays Harlow's agent, Arthur Landau, also a subject of controversy now. Raf Vallone, current romantic idol of the European screen, makes his Hollywood debut as Harlow's debonair stepfather. Peter Lawford and Martin Balsam appear as film executives, while Angela Lansbury enacts the role of Harlow's mother, and Michael Connors is Harlow's co-star.

48 Years In Films

Veteran cameraman and winner of four Academy Awards for his top cinematography, Joseph Ruttenberg celebrated his 48th year in the film business during his shooting of Joseph E. Levine's multi-million dollar Technicolor and Panavision production of "Harlow," opening at the Theatre, through Paramount Pictures release, starring lovely Carroll Baker in a spectacular recreation of the legendary platinum blonde Jean Harlow.

Levine's "Harlow" Sets Carroll Baker As Top Sex Symbol

Lovely, blonde Carroll Baker, currently starred in the title role in Joseph E. Levine's multi-million dollar Technicolor and Panavision production "Harlow," which opens at the Theatre, through Paramount Pictures release, has given new credence to a Hollywood tradition.

Historically, once every fifteen years a glamorous Hollywood sex symbol casts her electrifying image across the giant movie screen to captivate a new generation of moviegoers. There have been only two or three such magnetic feminine personalities in the history of motion pictures.

Such a star was born when the exciting Carroll Baker exploded on the screen with her highly controversial role of the thumb-sucking nymphet in Tennessee Williams' sensational "Baby Doll." For this role, the lovely Miss Baker won numerous honors and international adulation.

She followed this with her startling and spectacular portrayal of the exotic Rina Marlowe in Levine's highly successful film, "The Carpetbaggers," and emerged as the new and dynamic Hollywood "Love Goddess."

Now she is Hollywood's sex symbol of the Sixties portraying the life story of Jean Harlow, Hollywood's explosive blonde bombshell sex symbol of the Thirties. To many observers of the Hollywood scene, it was as though Destiny itself had cast shapely Carroll Baker for the role. Legend had become reality again.

Co-starred in pivotal roles are Red Buttons, Michael Connors, Martin Balsam, Angela Lansbury, Peter Lawford and Raf Vallone.

Star's "Pie" Easy As Work

Sometimes the life and work of a top movie star can be "easy as pie." However, this was not quite the case for lovely Carroll Baker who plays the explosive title role in Joseph E. Levine's multi-million dollar Technicolor and Panavision production of "Harlow," which opens at the Theatre, through Paramount Pictures Release.

Miss Baker refused to use a double for the picture's sequences which recreate an early Hollywood movie studio scene, and was smeared with custard pies for these hilarious scenes. "Harlow" director Gordon Douglas supervised the pie-throwing scenes with particularly nostalgic relish. He once directed such comedies at the Hal Roach Studios in the early Hollywood days.

Red Buttons Has Top Role In Levine's "Harlow" Film

At long last, Academy Award-winning actor Red Buttons and his business agent can realize a mutual identification in their future dealings. For the first time in his notable career on stage and screen, Buttons portrays a Hollywood agent.

Equally renowned for his outstanding delineations of both comedy and drama, it was one of the memorable moments of Buttons' career when producer Joseph E. Levine signed him for the role of the legendary platinum blonde Jean Harlow's widely publicized agent, Arthur Landau, in his multi-million dollar production of "Harlow," filmed in Technicolor and Panavision, and opening at the Theatre, via Paramount Pictures release.

Recognized today as one of America's most versatile performers, Red Buttons has won acclaim as a star of motion pictures, television, the stage and nightclubs.

Lovely Carroll Baker, sex symbol of the Sixties, stars in the title role in "Harlow." Buttons co-stars with Peter Lawford, Michael Connors, Angela Lansbury, Martin Balsam and Raf Vallone.

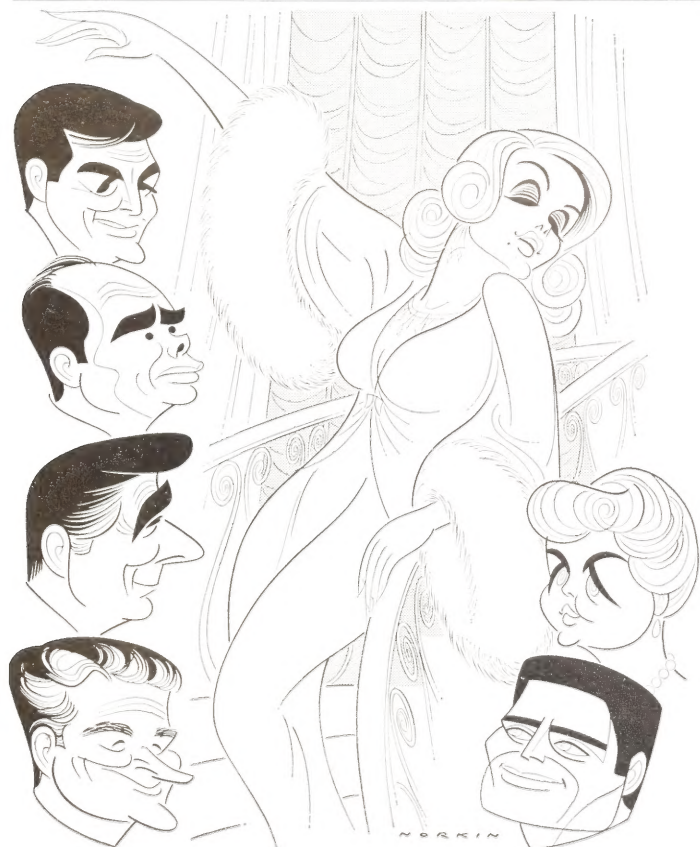

Noted jazz musician, composer and arranger Neal Hefti created and conducted the musical score for "Harlow," which Gordon Douglas directed from John Michael Hayes' screenplay.

"Harlow" Vividly Recaptures Hollywood's Era of Opulence

(Production Story)

Hollywood of the 30's, when platinum blonde Jean Harlow reigned as the fabulous Queen of the Screen, was famous for exciting glamor and lavishness. It was a day of spectacular film sets and priceless costuming. Producer Joseph E. Levine, in bringing his multi-million dollar Technicolor and Panavision production of "Harlow" to the screen, opening at the Theatre, via Paramount Pictures release, starring lovely Carroll Baker in the title role, has left no stone unturned. He has recaptured the spirit and reproduced the striking backgrounds which made Hollywood the entertainment center of the world.

Under the direction of noted art directors and scenic designers, Hal Pereira and Ronald Anderson, striking sets were created which dramatically re-create the era.

Particularly eye-catching is the imaginative home of a famed picture producer with its push-button control of sliding panels and imaginative lighting. Buttons are pressed and drapes silently open to reveal exotic tropical gardens. Roman baths feature indirect lighting in brilliant hues.

The brilliance of Hollywood in the 30's is also reflected in a lavish hotel banquet scene under giant crystal chandeliers, along with a dazzling reproduction of the Jean Harlow home at the peak of her storied career.

In selecting Miss Baker's co-stars for the picture, Levine has matched the opulence of its settings. An international cast of the world's foremost artists was assembled to substantially fulfill the requirements of portraying real characterizations in what may become the most controversial motion picture of our time.

Raf Vallone, current romantic sensation of the European screen, makes his Hollywood debut in the film as Marino Bello, Jean Harlow's debonair stepfather. The tragic figure of film executive Paul Bern is played by Peter Lawford, while Angela Lansbury is Harlow's mother, Michael Connors plays Harlow's co-star and Academy Award-winner Red Buttons is seen as Harlow's agent. Martin Balsam portrays the film executive who inspired Harlow to stardom.

Lovely Carroll Baker, starred as blonde bombshell Jean Harlow, and Michael Connors, as her co-star, are glimpsed in a jubilant mood in this scene from Joseph E. Levine's spectacular multi-million dollar production "Harlow," which has its premiere at the Theatre, through Paramount Pictures release.

Carroll Baker Wears Sex Image Of Harlow, Monroe

In the axiom of the entertainment world, the show must go on. The screen's fabulous love goddesses of another era, Jean Harlow and Marilyn Monroe, have passed from the scene. Today the world hails a new sex symbol as their voluptuous successor.

She is beautiful Carroll Baker, who stars in the top title role of producer Joseph E. Levine's spectacular multi-million dollar production of "Harlow," filmed in Technicolor and Panavision, which opens at the Theatre, through Paramount Pictures release.

Ever since Carroll Baker's incendiary emergence on the screen as the thumb-sucking nymphet in Tennessee Williams' "Baby Doll," and her startling portrait of the sensual Rina Marlowe in Levine's smash hit film, "The Carpetbaggers," she has been acclaimed as Hollywood's foremost love goddess. Even as Jean Harlow and Marilyn Monroe had created unusual interest with daring attire, so Carroll Baker makes frequent breath-catching appearances on the screen and in sleek transparent gowns on special public occasions.

When Producer Levine assigned the top-name role in "Harlow" to her, Carroll Baker displayed, like her legendary predecessors, the same dedication to her art. She steeped herself in "Harlowana," read every fact and legend about the fabulous platinum blonde and spent long hours in darkened projection rooms studying miles of film from tests to news shots and features on the fabled love goddess of the Thirties.

Joseph E. Levine's Film "Harlow" Explosive Blonde Bombshell Saga

Winner of Academy Awards and international acclaim, movie producer Joseph E. Levine, who has provided screen audiences with a brilliantly diversified array of outstanding film entertainment in the present era, now presents to the world of entertainment his newest, spectacular multi-million dollar production of "Harlow," in Technicolor and Panavision, which opens.....

..... at the Theatre, through Paramount Pictures release.

In the face of a challenging legend which has simmered for decades Levine went ahead with his plans to film the fabulous story of Jean Harlow, who rose to stardom as the screen's platinum blonde bombshell during the glamorous 30's. Implementing his decision with 2 years of planning, Levine selected beautiful Carroll Baker, Hollywood's foremost "love goddess" of the day, to portray the famous platinum blonde star in the film.

Levine also sensed other inherent values in Hollywood's most colorful period. Jean Harlow was swept to stardom in a maelstrom of great national turbulence. The glamorous 30's were the reckless years. It was the desperate depression era. Then Prohibition's repeal paved a primrose path to another world of tinsel fantasy. Excitement, thrill and sensation were the watchwords of the day. In the midst of this emotional tempest, Hollywood gave the world Jean Harlow, a beautiful, electrifying film siren who was destined to endure like Diana, the original Goddess of Love.

In bringing Jean Harlow's explosive story to the motion picture screen, Levine has endowed his film with lavish and colorful production values in the re-creation of the period when Harlow's name was synonymous with sex symbol, even as it belonged to Marilyn Monroe, and now Carroll Baker.

Top cinemaker Gordon Douglas directed Levine's "Harlow," which co-stars Red Buttons, Peter Lawford, Michael Connors, Angela Lansbury, Raf Vallone and Martin Balsam.

Michael Connors Is Star On Rise

Ruggedly handsome actor Michael Connors, whose own star has been rising steadily in Hollywood, appears in one of the most important roles of his career as the debonair motion picture star with whom Carroll Baker, as Jean Harlow, falls in love, in Joseph E. Levine's multi-million dollar Technicolor and Panavision production "Harlow," opening at the Theatre, through Paramount Pictures release.

Born in Fresno, California, Connors was a law student at the University of California in Los Angeles when the acting bug bit him. While still a student, he got a small part in "Sudden Fear," which starred Joan Crawford and introduced Jack Palance to films. Connors' small role convinced him that acting and not the Law was his metier. Then began the slow and arduous climb to the summit through little theatre, professional theatre and a nightclub act.

After several minor roles in various TV series, he was selected to star in the television series "Tightrope." He and the weekly show were an immediate hit. He followed this by turning to feature motion picture acting, winning better roles with each succeeding assignment. Now his co-starring role in Levine's "Harlow" attests to his growing stature in motion pictures.

Neal Hefti Music

Famed jazz composer, arranger and conductor Neal Hefti created and conducted the "Lonely Girl" theme music for Joseph E. Levine's multi-million dollar production of "Harlow," in Technicolor and Panavision, opening at the Theatre, via Paramount Pictures release. Lovely Carroll Baker stars in the film's title role, topping an all-star cast.

$100,000 Fashion Aura Highlights "Harlow"

Everything has its price today, even an aura; for it cost Joseph E. Levine more than $100,000 to re-create the aura that surrounded Jean Harlow, the platinum blonde star of the 30's, for his spectacular multi-million dollar production of "Harlow," in Technicolor and Panavision, opening at the Theatre, through Paramount Pictures release.

Famed Hollywood fashion stylist Edith Head was given the assignment of re-creating this aura, described by Webster as an emanation or electric atmosphere, around lovely Carroll Baker, who stars in Levine's picture as the explosive blonde bombshell.

"As far as possible," explained Miss Head recently, while Miss Baker looked on, "We have recaptured the feeling of Jean Harlow's costumes and accessories. We have endeavored to revivify her aura. The Harlow look was one of luxury, extravagance and feminine allure. As Jean Harlow, Carroll has 64 costume changes and loads of glittering jewels."

"Carroll Baker's 'Harlow' costumes are not shocker clothes," Miss Head continued. "If they seem scant and bare, they are also beautiful, provocative and daring. They are the clothes of the 30's, which uniquely resemble the fashion look of today, clinging and very feminine."

The shapely Miss Baker, who resembles Jean Harlow in many respects, even to exact measurements (35-24-35), and current recognition as the reigning sex symbol of Hollywood, nodded in agreement and observed cogently:

"Jean Harlow was a great star in her day because she was also a trend-setter. Had the topless bathing suit been in vogue in her time, she would probably have been the first to exhibit it publicly, even as she discarded the brassiere on and off the screen."

In her top-starring title role in "Harlow," Miss Baker shares stellar honors with Red Buttons, Michael Connors, Peter Lawford, Angela Lansbury, Martin Balsam and Raf Vallone. Gordon Douglas directed the film from John Michael Hayes' screenplay.

Fabled Mansion

Screen audiences will be treated to an intimate view of a rarely-photographed Hollywood mansion in Joseph E. Levine's spectacular multi-million dollar Technicolor and Panavision production, "Harlow," starring Carroll Baker as the love goddess of the 30's, which opens at the Theatre, through Paramount Pictures release.

It is the lavish showplace estate on Summit Drive in Beverly Hills, once owned and occupied by famed Hollywood producer David O. Selznick. The sequence features a bevy of bathing beauties of the 30's and serves to introduce Miss Baker, as Jean Harlow, to Hollywood's madcap life in that era.

Gordon Douglas Vividly Recalls Blonde Bombshell

Hollywood historians with a penchant for legends concerning film folk could have a field day with the selection of Gordon Douglas to direct Joseph E. Levine's multi-million dollar Technicolor and Panavision production of "Harlow," starring present day sex symbol Carroll Baker in the title role, which opens at the Theatre, through Paramount Pictures release.

Before the famous Platinum Blonde of the 30's, Jean Harlow, swept to world-wide celebrity as the screen's great love goddess, she broke into pictures as an extra at the Hal Roach studios. Douglas was a messenger for Hal Roach at the time and has a vivid recollection of the star's humble beginnings.

Later, after functioning in other departments, the enterprising Douglas became casting director at the Roach studios and finally moved up to director, but by then the controversial Jean Harlow was making sensational headlines around the globe. He considers it a strange twist of fate, that a man who witnessed the birth of one of the greatest stars Hollywood ever produced, should be selected to direct the Jean Harlow life story.

Since the days of his early association with Hal Roach and Jean Harlow, Douglas has steadily built a reputation as one of the top directors in motion pictures. His directorial assignments, over the years, have resulted in some of Hollywood's most outstanding entertainment and boxoffice smash hits, among them such notable films as "Kiss Tomorrow Goodbye," "What A Wonderful Life," "Robin and the 7 Hoods," "Rio Conchos" and, currently, "Harlow."

Angela Lansbury "Harlow" Co-Star

Angela Lansbury won an Academy Award nomination the first time she stepped before a motion picture camera for her performance in "Gaslight," and she has been one of the most 'in demand' actresses in Hollywood ever since.

Miss Lansbury, who has portrayed everything from international politicians to dizzy dowagers, accepted one of her most challenging roles when producer Joseph E. Levine offered her the part of Jean Harlow's mother in his multi-million dollar Technicolor and Panavision production of "Harlow," coming to the Theatre, through Paramount Pictures release. For Mama Jean Bello figured more prominently in the life of the fabulous platinum blonde star than anyone else, and her influence was forceful throughout Jean Harlow's stormy and sensational career.

The London born Miss Lansbury, considered one of the most competent and busiest actresses in Hollywood, counts among her film credits such outstanding films as "The Manchurian Candidate" and "The Greatest Story Ever Told."

With present love goddess Carroll Baker top-starred in the title role in "Harlow," Miss Lansbury co-stars in the picture with Red Buttons, Peter Lawford, Martin Balsam, Michael Connors and Raf Vallone.

Levine's "Harlow" Co-Stars Martin Balsam In Key Role

Noted actor and star of motion pictures, TV and the stage, Martin Balsam won wide critical acclaim for his portrayal of the pioneer film producer who is about to lose his studio in Joseph E. Levine's memorable screen hit, "The Carpetbaggers."

Synopsis

(Not for Publication)

Hollywood — 1928! Land of milk and honey, magic and fantasy. As beautiful platinum blonde Jean Harlow's (CARROLL BAKER) spectacular and controversial career begins, she is an unknown.

She lives with her mother, Mama Jean Bello (ANGELA LANSBURY), and her handsome, opportunistic stepfather, Marino Bello (RAF VALLONE), and works in the movies playing extra and bit parts.

A minor Hollywood agent, Arthur Landau (RED BUTTONS), spots her on a film set and gets her a series of comedy roles. Landau soon realizes he has a gold mine in Jean. He reveals his plans for Jean to his wife, (HANNA LANDY), who offers valuable advice.

Landau introduces Jean to film star Jack Harrison (MICHAEL CONNORS). Then he arranges for Jean to meet Richard Manley (LESLIE NEILSEN), a top independent producer who is searching for a feminine lead. Landau wins Jean a contract for two hundred dollars a week.

Jean's first picture is a personal defeat. The critics praise the film, but pan her. However, they rave about her body and she is heralded as a sex symbol. The fabulous blonde bombshell is launched! Manley sends her on a personal appearance tour, and she returns to Hollywood a sensational success.

In order to sign her with Majestic Studios for more money, Landau succeeds in securing Jean's release from her contract with Manley. He gets Everett Redman (MARTIN BALSAM), head man at Majestic to buy up her contract. It is here that Jean and Landau meet Redman's executive right hand, Paul Bern (PETER LAW-FORD).

Jean becomes a world-wide sensation at Majestic Studios. The Harlow platinum blonde hair style sweeps the globe. Every girl tries to look like Harlow. The gossip columns link her with Harrison, then with Bern.

Jean and Paul are married in one of Hollywood's most highly publicized and spectacular weddings. The world is hardly ready for the shocking news which follows soon after. Paul Bern has committed suicide. Jean is distraught. Despite Landau's efforts, Jean is inconsolable.

Then one night, exhausted by her futile search for self, Jean walks past a theatre where long lines wait to see a Harlow film. She passes unnoticed. And then she is at the sea shore. There is moonlight on the water. The wind catches her dress. She kicks off her shoes and the waves come in crashing in foam around her.

Jean falls to her knees, head down, crying, "Who am I? Jean Harlow? I can't find her. I can't find me."

Sirens screech. An ambulance with flashing lights pulls up to the beach. A small crowd has gathered.

Jean is in an oxygen tent at the hospital. She murmurs a last farewell to Mama Jean and is gone. And as she passes, we see a background of Jean Harlows; as the eager young girl; the hopeful actress; the star; radiant, full of life—loveable to a world. Lost to herself.

WHAT WAS HARLOW REALLY LIKE?

She was the glittering, glamorous movie queen who put Hollywood on the map!

She was the Platinum Blonde who became the most desired woman in the world!

She was the darling of first-night parties and third-rate hotels!

She was famous for tight dresses, loose living, and quick trips to the bottom between pictures!

She was the girl who couldn't taste life—she had to devour it!

She was the star who didn't know when to stop!

Presto—Jean Harlow

WHEN MILD-MANNERED reporter Clark Kent ducks into a phone booth for his minute metamorphosis, all he comes up with is some kind of a nut who runs around with a big scarlet letter on his shirt and who has a "thing about leaping tall buildings in a single bound. But when sex-slanted actress Carroll Baker slips into a dressing room these days, a more spectacular transformation occurs. Not a bird not a plane, but a Bombshell.

Miss Baker has been prepping for Paramount Pictures, in which she will play the platinum blonde who (as her press releases crackled) could "flip a gump with an agile hip." In a telephone interview from London, Miss Baker said, "Jean Harlow" was launched aboard the Queen Mary en route to the British premiere of "The Carpetbaggers" in which she also stars. On ship she studied interviews in the TV clips and photographs, read in the "Ladies Home Journal" and "Vogue."

I mean, she's a pretty thing, she's made up because he wasn't there behind the closed doors. But our screen writers will improve the lines.

Harlow Night on the Queen Mary was so exciting—champagne, caviar, and an amazing plating of the menu. I spent four hours on makeup and hair styling to become Jean Harlow. There were people on board who had personally known her. When I entered the room and the orchestra playing the old songs, some of those people actually cost more than $100,000 contributes excitement that is to be found in Joseph Levine's "Harlow," in Panavision and Technicolor, playing the platinum blonde sex symbol. The costumes for the film -- tight, transparent, only a fraction (albeit a very eye-filling) of the multi-million dollar cost of re-creating an entire era.

Fashion stylist Edith Head was given the task of creating the "Harlow" aura, described by Levine as "a woman's electric atmosphere, around Miss Harlow."

"We have recaptured the feeling of Jean Harlow and her accessories. We have endeavored to re-create the Harlow look was one of luxury, extravagance, allure. As Jean Harlow, Carroll has 64 loads of glittering jewels."

"Harlow's costumes are not shocker clothes," Edith Head explained. "If they seem scant and bare, they are provocative and daring. They are the clothes of a woman who is very much in vogue."

Carroll Baker, who resembles Jean Harlow in many ways, is recognized as the reigning sex symbol of the 1930s.

Carroll Baker was a great star in her day because she was the first to exhibit the topless bathing suit in vogue and probably have been the first to exhibit it and discard the brassiere on and off the screen.

In the 30's, when platinum blonde Jean Harlow, Queen of the Screen, was famous for her lavishness as well as spectacular and dramatic production in Panavision and Technicolor, Producer Joseph E. Levine, in his multi-million dollar production of "Harlow," also has recaptured the feeling of the striking backgrounds which made Hollywood the center of the world.

Levine, with the aid of noted art directors and scenic designers, including Ronald Anderson, striking sets and costumes.

Watching is the lavish home of a famed picture studio, with push-button control of sliding panels and buttons are pressed and drapes silently open to reveal tropical gardens. Roman baths feature brilliant hues.

Hollywood in the 30's is also reflected in the set scene under giant crystal chandeliers, a reproduction of the Jean Harlow home at the height of her career.

ANGELA LANSBURY as Harlow's Mother. She smothered Harlow with a mother's love, a woman's jealousy -- and a rival's hate!

CARROLL BAKER AS 'HARLOW' explosive sex symbol of the Thirties, is shown above in scenes from the long-awaited Joseph E. Levine production in Panavision and Technicolor. Above, as the flamboyant, high-living Harlow. At right, with Michael Connors in a "live-it-up" offstage scene from the film.

NOTORIOUS WEDDING NIGHT Follows one of film's most fabulous wedding parties, left in Joseph E. Levine's 'Harlow.' The bride is Carroll Baker as the fabulous love goddess of another era; the groom is Peter Lawford as the studio executive whom Harlow married. Raf Vallone, as Harlow's stepfather, watches the wedding couple.

HARLOW HITS THE HEIGHTS aided by her agent, played by Red Buttons (right) and her mother and stepfather, portrayed in the film by Angela Lansbury and Raf Vallone. Carroll Baker, plays Jean Harlow in the new Joseph E. Levine production "Harlow". In Panavision and Technicolor, "Harlow" vividly recaptures Hollywood's most spectacular, most romantic era.

JOSEPH E. LEVINE'S 'HARLOW' MOST PUBLICIZED FILM EVER!

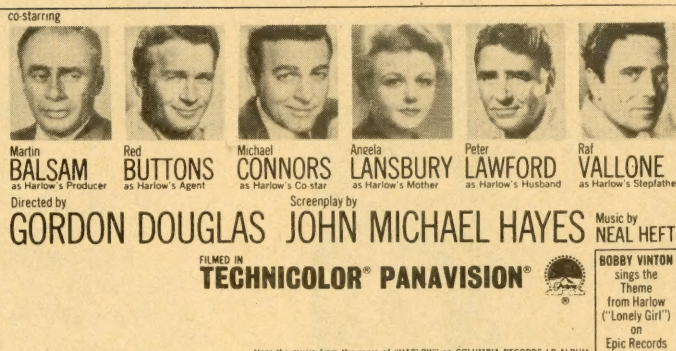

With his renowned flair for showmanship, celebrated movie producer Joseph E. Levine launched pre-filming activities for his Technicolor and Panavision production of "Harlow," a Paramount Pictures release, with what has been exuberantly acclaimed as one of the most brilliant promotion coups ever accomplished in the history of motion pictures.

Moreover Levine's memorable and astounding feat occurred in the middle of the Atlantic Ocean, aboard the famous Cunard Line's steamship "Queen Mary," months before actual shooting on "Harlow" started in Hollywood.

WHAT WAS HARLOW REALLY LIKE? She was the star who didn't know when to stop!

JOSEPH E. LEVINE presents

It began with the fabulous trans-Atlantic voyage of the luxury liner, when Carroll Baker, the screen's beautiful sex symbol of the Sixties, who is Jean Harlow in the picture, accompanied by Levine, a staff of makeup technicians and an international group of press, radio and TV correspondents to record and report the event, underwent her miraculous five day transformation.

She had boarded the ship as today's glamorous, exciting film star, and she landed in Great Britain looking, acting, talking and captivating the world as an almost flawless reincarnation of the legendary platinum bombshell, "Harlow," the screen's explosive sex symbol of the Thirties.

The resulting avalanche of enthusiastic praise and publicity which greeted Miss Baker's seemingly magical transformation from "love goddess" of the day to "siren" of another decade, convinced producer Levine he had made the right choice in selecting Miss Baker for the title role in his multi-million dollar production of "Harlow".

As Levine's lavishly mounted production of "Harlow" recreates her absorbing story, the fabulous platinum blonde was a vivid magnetic and controversial beauty who shook the entertainment world to its foundation. The film also recaptures the grandeur of Hollywood in the 30's with its colorful and dazzling costumes and settings.

Highly controversial and at times sensational, the Harlow legend has endured for more than thirty years. The Jean Harlow saga remained one of Hollywood's most incendiary topics until Levine began his penetrating research into her public and private life.

An international cast of top screen artists co-star with Miss Baker in Producer Levine's "Harlow". Academy Award-winner Red Buttons plays Harlow's agent, Arthur Landau, also a subject of controversy now. Raf Vallone, current romantic idol of the European screen, makes his Hollywood debut as Harlow's debonair stepfather. Peter Lawford and Martin Balsam appear as film executives, while Angela Lansbury enacts the role of Harlow's mother, and Michael Connors is Harlow's co-star.
